

TAYLOR

Appl. No. 10/510,604
October 8, 2004RECEIVED
CENTRAL FAX CENTER

MAR 30 2007

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

Methods of improving the thermal oxidative stability of a distillate fuel, by selectively reducing the active concentration in the fuel of N-H containing heterocyclic aromatic compounds in which the nitrogen atom of the N-H group is part of the aromatic system. The fuel also contains an active concentration of metal compounds or will be exposed to active metal compounds in storage or in use.